DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This four bay by three bay, two and a half story house faces south. Built on brick foundations, the house has red asbestos shingles and white trim. The south porch wraps around to the west elevation and has a half-hipped roof supported by eight wooden columns. The porch is enclosed by a balustraded railing and the west section is screened in. The south door is glass and wooden paneled.

There are one-over-one double-hung windows; some are flanked by white wooden louvered shutters. At the southeast corner of the southeast elevation there is a two story pentagonal tower with pyramidal roof. On the east elevation there is a one story angled bay window at the first level overhung by a square bay at the second level. There is a small oval one story bay window at the southwest corner of the west elevation. There is a two story bay window on the west elevation. Also on the west elevation is a Palladian window composed of a center one-over-one double-hung window flanked by fixed lights and surmounted by a four light semi-circular window. There are hipped casement dormer windows at the west and south elevations.

The house has a hipped roof above the south section and a gabled roof above the north elevation. The roof has raised seam metal covering.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is representative of the dwellings built in the suburbs at the turn of the 20th century.

The community of Somerset Heights was begun by five employees of the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1890. In that year Harvey Wiley, Charles Crampton, Daniel Salmon, Miles Fuller and Horace Horton organized the Somerset Heights Colony Company and purchased 50 acres of "Friendship" just over the District line in Montgomery County.¹ They subdivided the tract,² named streets for English counties, and agreed to construct five residences immediately. Lot sales at first were brisk, but by the end of the decade interest in the project had waned.

Block 1, on which this property lies, is a long narrow strip with 20 lots fronting onto Cumberland Avenue. Daniel Salmon owned Lot 18, and on the east end of that lot he had this dwelling constructed before selling it in 1900 to Charles Frederick Cook.³ Salmon was an internationally reknown scientist in the veterinary field, and built 4728 Dorset Avenue for his residence in Somerset Heights.

Cook did not live in Somerset long, selling to Zenas and Ettie Alderman in 1906.⁴ The Aldermans in turn sold the property nine years later to Guy and Martha Allen,⁵ who in 1921 sold to Dr. Paul Dunbar and his wife Alice.⁶ The Dunbars lived here for many years, selling in 1957 to Dutch diplomat Theo Van Hemert.⁷ The present owners purchased the property in 1978.
